The Daily Standard. Vednesday, April 19, 1871.

The Paris Revolution. The whole tenor of European news is to the effect that the revolt in Paris will be suppressed. Paris is now undergoing McClure Street Dancing another siege; but the massing of an overwhelming force, under the command of generals devoted to the Versailles Government, and starvation, will soon force the Communists to capitulate. It is only a matter of time, and President Thiers and his Cabinet are evidently aware that the time of surrender cannot be long delayed. The large cities in other parts of France, noted as being the centres of Red Republeans, remain quiet, still giving at least a tacit support to the measures of the Constituent As-sembly. If Lyons, Toulouse, Marseilles and other cities were to declare against the Versailles Government, an early sup-pression of the rebellion would be ex-tremely doubtful. As France now stands, it is thirty-eight millions of Frenchmen out of Paris against two millions of Parisians. Again: The Constituent Assembly is composed of several hundred representatives from all parts of the nation; and yet we have not heard of any division of opinion existing among them as to the advisability of acknowledging the Paris Government as supreme. On the contrary,—beyond cer-tain consecsions to the Parisians to secure peace with the revolutionists,— the Assembly seems firm in its purpose to maintain itself as the de facto and de jure Government of France. Even the recent refusal of President Thiers to make forther terms, unless the Parindicates, to say the least, confidence in the Versailles government to speedily reduce Paris. One may well be astonished at the inflammable character of the Parisians. After experienceing all the evils of the most extraordinary siege of ancient or modern times, with the Ger-mans at their gates and in possession of French soil, yet they are all in a blaze of revolution. The peut up fires of ultra republicanism have burst forth in greater strength and volume than at NOW any time between the revolution of February 1848, and the coup d'etat in December '51. It any rational conclusion at all can be drawn from the Paris revolution, it is that the principles of the revolutionists will sooner or later succeed : and that France in spite of Legitimists, Orleanists and Bonspartists will in all probability become the first permanent and well ordered republic among the Breat nationalities of Europe. All the doubts raised against the fitness of the French people for republicanism, is next to worthless, for beyond a doubt the French centres of intelligence are republicans to the core, and as soon as the peasantry shall have been brought to feel and act like the inhabitants of the cities, there will be an end to Kingthe Parisians may appear to-day, yet they are really educating all Europe up to higher notions of the true principles of human government. The anarchy will be suppressed; but the principles of the anarchists will live and make converts in every nation in Europe. The world will yet have much to thank the French revolutionists for, though it may now generally condemu them. The Death of Capt. Mouatt.

We have to record the sad news of the death of another pioneer of British Columbia, death of another pioneer of British Columbia, or rather of this Northern Coast—Capt. W. A. Mouatt—as will be seen by our report per steamer Grappler. In addition to what is there written, we add the following: The Indians who were in the cance with him at the time of his death, state that he died quite suddealy, having been reading from a book at the time of his decease; he dropped the volume and expired immediately. His remains will be brought down by the Otter, on her return from the North, together with the deceased gentleman's family—a widow and four children. In this connection, we are glad to be able to state, that in addition to his considerable property, real and personal, his considerable property, real and personal, his life was insured in the sum of $6,500.

his life was insured in the sum of $6,500.

Mr. Nelson, of Alert Bay, very kindly prepared a tin coffin to receive the body.

Capt. Mcuatt, as most colonists will know, came to this coast before this Colony was established—in the service of the H. B. Co.—and he remained, with but a short interval, in the same, until the time of his demise. He arrived out from England about '46 or '47, as second officer of the old brig Cadboro. He will be remembered also as master of the Labouchere, when she was lost; also in command, from time to time, of the Otter, the Beaver, the Enterprise, &c.; and at his death had charge of the Company's trading post at Fort Rupert. In British Columbia, no one was more popular or more esteemed, and he was more popular or more esteemed, and he was respected by all classes to whom he was known. A native of S:affordshire, England, he died, aged about 53 years.
